We are excited to announce the launch of ALKFusion, a new and innovative ALK Positive lung cancer patient group.

ALKFusion was conceived by a group of seven lung cancer patient advocates with over 30 years of combined patient focused advocacy experience in the lung cancer community. Our shared vision is to initiate and support patient centric research with a focus on collaboration and disease management. As a patient centric organization, we are committed to accelerating research to improve the outcomes for ALK Positive lung cancer patients. As patients, we are on the frontline of this disease. Changing the course of this disease impacts us more directly than other participants in this arena.

There are organizations that offer support and information to the ALK Positive lung cancer community in a multitude of ways. We are immensely grateful to have these organizations available to us. However, as patients, we also recognized that there is a need for an organization whose focus is on patient centric driven research and collaboration with the targeted goal of extending lives and managing this disease.

We know that great outcomes will be the result of these partnerships and we are excited to be part this. "If not us, then who? If not now, then when?"

You can find ALKFusion on social media with presence on both Facebook and Twitter, where you will also find the first edition of the ALKFusion Reporter featuring a curation of current scientific articles regarding ALK+ research.

Best Regards,
